Reef Multimedia

There many kinds of art, paintings, sculpture, music and photography, just to name a few, but there are few that can bring tears to your eyes like a professional video of a memorial service, celebration of life, a wedding or special event.

After graduation Milligan attended Ithaca College in upstate New York and Columbia College in Chicago as he pursued a career in film production. His interests took him to Northern California where gained experience as Blu-Ray Discs and DVDs he had to scratch the itch and bought a bunch of top-notch production gear. He began shooting, editing and producing as a "second gig". His newspaper job at Ocean Reef exposed him to the best of community entertainment and charity events. It was a chance to spread the word creatively in "moving pictures". With the help of friends he went on to shoot fundraisers and special events such as the Florida Keys Children's Shelter Project Inspiration with Wyland and Lisa Lansden,

Keys Drunknapping Mystery

This is the kind of thing that seems to only happen in the Florida Keys. My friend Lisa's 23-year-old son Mitch from Wisconsin was visiting her recently. Lisa is a bartender at Pontune's Tiki Bar and she lives on a houseboat on the hook in the anchorage. She also owns another boat, the Austin-Tyler, moored there which Mitch was staying on during his visit.

Around midnight, after Lisa finished her shift she went home but Mitch decided the night was young and took off for the Caribbean Club in the dingy. After a few phone calls to mom he was able to locate the Crib from the shoreline. Lisa waited up and became alarmed when she couldn't reach Mitch a couple hours later. Not knowing her son's cell battery had died, she called a friend for help and the two of them took off for the Crib by boat. There they found the dingy tied up to the dock and what looked to be a passed out Mitch aboard, so they towed the dingy back and tied it up to the Austin-Tyler and went home. They figured that Mitch would wake up eventually and climb aboard.

The next day she noticed the dingy was gone from the Austin-Tyler and assumed that all was fine. Later that day she heard from Mitch. He said he went to leave the Caribbean Club and the dingy was missing so he took a cab back to Pontune's and slept on the dock. The person that Lisa towed was not her son and was nowhere to be found but the dingy was left at the dock!

Now Lisa is left wondering and would love to know whom it was that she drunknapped.
