Editorial: Dragon Breath

A friend of mine recently visited her hometown in the Midwest. While she was there she went to a bar with a friend who is an undercover cop. The ladies had a few cocktails and then the cop gave my friend a Nu-Breath breath mint. They then went out to the unmarked cruiser and the cop administered a breathalyzer test on my friend. My friend should have been way over the limit but she was shocked to find out that she had passed with flying colors! Knowing that I am always interested in new products, my friend couldn't wait to show it to me. I decided to try it for myself and immediately ordered a case.

We all know that you should never drink too much and drive. Mom's Taxi is a whole lot cheaper than a DUI or taking the risk of hurting another person.

Several years ago one of the advertising accounts I called on told me about a salesperson from a radio station calling on him and she had alcohol on her breath at lunchtime. He was so turned off that he wouldn't talk to her and all credibility of that radio station was lost for him.

There are professional people who do have a martini at lunch and Nu-Breath is the answer for them.

I woke up this morning with dragon breath bouncing off my pillow back at me. Last nights chips and dip wreaking havoc in my mouth. It tasted like dinosaur crap! My cat wouldn't even come near me. I popped a mint and felt immediate freshness. It removes cigarette, garlic, onion, and coffee breath, guaranteed! I am looking for retail outlets. If you are interested call me.
