

2018 Model is Here!

Renault and Ford have joined forces to create the perfect small car for women in 2018

Mixing the Renault 'Clio' and the Ford 'Taurus' they have designed the 'Clitaurus'.

It comes in pink, and the average male car thief won't be able to find it - let alone turn it on - even if someone tells him where it is and how to do it.

Rumor has it though, it can be a real bitch to start in the morning! Some have reported that on cold winter mornings, when you really need it, you can't get it to turn over.

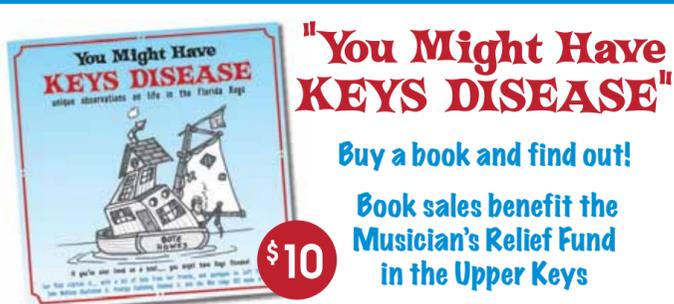

New models are initially fun to own, but very costly to maintain, and horribly expensive to get rid of.

Used models may initially appear to have curb appeal and a low price, but eventually have an increased appetite for fuel, and the curb weight typically increases with age.

Manufacturers are baffled as to how the size of the trunk increases, but say that the paint may just make it LOOK bigger.

This model is not expected to reach collector status, and most owners believe it is best to lease one, and replace when it becomes troublesome.

Book sales benefit the Musician's Relief Fund in the Upper Keys

This 32-page book was created in the spirit of poking fun at our life here in the Florida Keys.

Written by Sue Beal with a little help from her friends, it was illustrated by the late John McKinna, a syndicated cartoonist.

The book was published and made available for sale so that the proceeds could help local musicians and their families.

Gilberts Resort funded the printing of the first edition, so all proceeds from the sale of this book will be used to help musicians in need.

Here in the Keys, we enjoy the music of so many talented, world-class musicians. Even as our community enjoys the fruits of their labors, we know the musicians have little to spare and have no safety net for when disaster strikes and they cannot work.

Our musicians are the first to sign up to make a community fundraiser or benefit a success.

Surviving Hurricane Irma, Part 2: Back on the Island

The drive down the stretch was amazing, everything looked the same as before Irma. I really don't remember much of the drive, as I was still too occupied visualizing my poor boat laying on her side in the mangroves, masts broken, shredded halyards and rigging everywhere.

Once we got to the bridge I started noticing how brown everything was, and leafless. There was debris everywhere as you drove off the bridge, the cleanup crews were already hard at work and the roads weren't in bad shape. The thing I couldn't get my head around was how denuded every tree was.

We finally turned down our street, driving over a lot of tree branches, couldn't park in the driveway, had trouble getting to the front door. The roof looked intact, all the shutters were still closed. Lonnie was shaking pretty badly by the time he got the shutter off the main entrance, he opened the door and ... I felt cold air! The ceiling fan was moving, the power was on! We were in shock, no water in the house, none of the multitude of downed trees hit the house.

Do you believe in Karma? I do! On our way home from the west coast we stopped in a rest area to let the pets stretch and tell us how much fun they were not having. A lone man in a large white truck with a sweet little dog came up to us and, looking rather sad, asked if we happened to have any extra gas. I'd forgotten we had two gas cans in the back, about seven gallons left. I didn't know if I'd need it to get home due to no electricity for the gas stations, Lonnie and I looked at each other and both said, "it's yours." We refused money and said, "Just pay it forward."

I'm trying really hard to help Lonnie get the pets into the house and open up the house a bit, but I'm looking at the lagoon and all the destruction in it. I have to get out to the sound and see if I can see She Breeze's masts above the mangroves. I finally break away and locate one of our kayaks, you would not believe the mess this lagoon was.

When the storm surge of five to seven feet coming out of Largo Sound hit the line of homes on the shore, it pretty much took everything on the lower floors and carried it into the lagoon. So dodging all the floating debris, I made my way out the channel, then I saw a big problem, a 37 foot sailboat was rudder down in the channel, her aft end completely submerged. It had apparently washed up on a piling in the channel and there it sat, stuck between the piling and the side of the channel.

Kayaking past it, I realized I was not going to be able to bring She Breeze back in to her dock. The dock was no longer together anyway. By this time I'm kind of laughing /crying hysterically, but I just keep paddling out. I'm half way to the channel markers in the sound and I still do not see her masts. I'm paddling like a mad woman, I just have to make it to the first channel in Pennekamp's marina.

I see her masts, fanf*#ingfantastic!!! OK, so the wind generator is missing two of the three blades, and her main and jib halyards are shredded. Also, why is the main boom sitting on the deck, the topping lift wire split? But it's ok, She Breeze is floating, all the water is still on the outside. I proceed to do a happy dance on her deck like nobody's watching and start thinking about where the hell do we go from here!!!!
