SURVIVING HURRICANE IRMA

September is one of the busiest months of hurricane season, and this one proved to be a doozie. We Keys folk tend to get complacent and just plain stupid when it comes to potential hurricanes coming our way. After all, we haven't had anything threaten us for a long time, and we believed we live in an area that is immune to direct hits.

We no longer think that way. In the past when a potential storm is due in the area I take my She Breeze out into the mooring field at Pennekamp, tie up to a mooring ball, drop my anchor and let her swing with the winds: simple and effective. Irma scared me, so one of my fellow sail boaters and I took our boats out to the mangroves. In perfect little channels we spider webbed our boats and also carried our anchors into the mangroves. We battened down the hatches. (I just love using sailor jargon!) We removed sails and anything else that could take flight. The hardest part of all this is looking back at my She Breeze as I'm leaving her and not knowing if she'll be there when I get back.

So now I'm staying at my friend Lonnie's house and he is getting nervous about riding this storm out in his concrete block house. So we decide to run... with a cat, a dog and two cockatiels. We hear Irma is tracking up the west, so it's logical to head up the east coast, right?

Wrong! We finally find a hotel that will take us and our pets, but can only stay one night, then we see the news and sure enough, this thing is so large we realize we have to keep going. Then we make another bad decision and head west to Ft. Myers.

We realize we can't stay in the little marina inn we just found; it's on the water Scheeesh! We go looking for a hurricane shelter, get turned away from the first one, and finally a middle school let us in after a six-hour wait in line. We, and a few other thousand people, get ready to bed down for the night and the duration of a killer storm the likes of which we have never seen here in southern Florida. I go to sleep thinking of my She Breeze and praying she makes it, along with the rest of the islands in the Keys.

We spent two nights in the shelter, on the third day they finally said it was safe to leave. We were heading home, but found out the roads were closed to the Keys until all the debris was cleared from the roads and the bridges were inspected. We found refuge in Homestead with a cousin of Lonnie, so again we wait...

In the morning we find out they are letting residents into the Upper Keys, so we pack up our traveling zoo and head down Krome Avenue, hoping not to run into lines of traffic. I was very low on gas and there were no gas stations with electricity. We got to the end of Krome and had no traffic. There was a state trooper there and she asked me if I had a resident sticker, I pointed to it in my window and she waved me through.

Then we were on the stretch, as giddy as a couple of kids going to a circus, grinning ear to ear... Then reality hit, was Lonnie's house still there? Was my She Breeze still floating right side up, is there even a dock left to tie her to?

They say there is a reason,
They say that time will heal,
But neither time nor reason,
Will change the way I feel,
For no one knows the heartache,
That lies behind our smiles,
No one knows how many times,
We have broken down and cried,
We want to tell you something,
So there won't be any doubt,
You're so wonderful to think of,
But so hard to be without.
