COVID-19 has taught me that there are 3 types of people in this world:

Type 1: Generally middle aged or older. Supplies are already at their house. They have a sense of responsibility and preparedness. They don't have to go anywhere, they sit and watch the chaos. Have 50 rolls of TP because they caught it on sale 6 months ago. Make fun of type 2 & 3 people.

Type 2: People that flip out over anything, could be any age - buying things randomly for no reason to make them feel better. They buy everything. They empty stores. They are unprepared for anything, at least they know it and act upon it now. Have 50 rolls of TP because they bought it this week. Generally doesn't make fun of anyone, but fights with other type 2 people.

Type 3: Millennials (mostly) - no preparedness. No urgency. Mad at type 2 people because they bought everything. Thinks that people should leave things in stores for them. They show up 3 days too late and take pics and complain. Probably received participation trophies. Should learn some preparedness. Has 1 roll of TP. Complains about type 2 people, doesn't know type 1 people exist.

My wife has been missing a week now. The police said to prepare for the worst. So, I had to go down to the Salvation Army to get all of her clothes back.
