An alligator resting on a large limb is unfazed by our presence.

Alligator Alcatraz has been in the news since June 2025, when an immigration detention facility intended for the worst of the worst was slated to be built on an improved site inside Big Cypress National Preserve. Big Cypress has been occupied by the Micosukee Indian tribe since the 1840s, because an impenetrable wilderness kept them from being captured in the Indian Wars in Florida.

The site formerly known as Dade-Collier Training and Transition Airport was constructed in the early 1970s for commercial and military use, and as a place to land the space shuttle.

Generations of Floridians grew up swimming, fishing and even baptizing their young in these headwaters of the Everglades.

Environmental concerns in the late 1970s/early 1980s halted further development.

Alligator Alcatraz is a catchy name designed to garner attention to the problem of the bad hombres already here, process them for deportation and to act as a deterrent for future illegals. As a native Floridian, I consider the entire media campaign ridiculous. The folks who created the narrative of man-eating pythons and alligators in Florida do not realize that there are cities and towns here, full of regular folks who treasure the Everglades. Generations of Floridians grew up taking airboat rides down the ditch, swamp buggy treks through the cypress forest and slogging on foot through the river of grass.

The original settlers lived off the the land. On fertile farmland they planted orange trees and pineapples. On grassy ridges they raised cattle and they fished in the lakes, rivers and ocean. They ate swamp cabbage, a delicacy known as hearts of palm, made from the core of young saw palmetto, Florida's state tree. Frogs legs are Everglades fare... tastes like chicken. They made gopher stew. For the Florida neophyte, that's not stew made by a "go-fer," a low wage undocumented worker.

Alligator Alcatraz is a media concoction reported by those who live in canyons made of concrete, lined by tall buildings that scrape the sky. Their roads are like tunnels in the form of a rat maze. The only wildlife they know are street rats and park pigeons. Though these reporters may have visited Florida, they probably only made it to the Alligator Farm to watch gators in pens jump out of muddy water to snatch a dead chicken on a stick. They leave Florida with a live alligator souvenir, who after a small starring role in the third-grader's report about what I did this summer, ends up being flushed down the toilet to appear later in a sewer near you.

The new detention facility is close-by the gallery of nature photographer Clyde Butcher, whose black and white photographs bring the wild lands of the Everglades to life. He spent his life photographing with a large format film camera, wading waist deep in the alligator's swamp in order to give the viewer an intimate perspective of a pristine environment worthy of preservation. As far as I can tell, despite photographing in alligator infested waters, Butcher still has all his limbs intact.

Florida is made up of lots of swamp. In predevelopment time Florida was 50% wetland - approx. 20.3 million acres. Now there are only about one-half of the original wetlands remaining.

Alligator Alcatraz... CONTINUED - Photos by Carol Ellis

My friend Bill Hutto and the local guide contemplating the first cold one of the day.

Wildlife need wild lands was the callout for land acquisition, and the State of Florida legislature enacted Preservation 2000 & Forever Florida to help do just that.

In 1999 I took multiple trips to the headwaters of the Everglades to document the State of Florida's $43 million purchase of Fisheating Creek, the State's most pristine wilderness site and unspoiled lands near Lake Okeechobee. Historically the early settlers relied on Florida's web of creeks and waterways as their primary mode of passage through impenetrable swamp. The purchase of this 52-mile western tributary of Lake Okeechobee returned the land from private ownership back to the people of the State of Florida.

I traveled Fisheating Creek aboard a jon boat with some well-armed locals and a guide who had more alligator teeth around his neck than actual teeth in his mouth. Sentinel oaks and limbs of ancient trees reaching out over the water were the guideposts along the way. As we traveled to remote areas, touched only by Mother Nature, the cameras' wide angle lens took in the beautiful view, as with open arms, offered a wide embrace for a perfect ecosystem. Back on shore I sampled wild boar stew from the guides' crusty crock-pot. He lived off the land and provided food for the local women, children and for those who could not provide for themselves.

The residents of Alligator Alcatraz probably possess more skills to deal with the wildlife in Florida than the media gives them credit for. Show me a Honduran man with a machete, and I will show you a survivor.

There is no place like the Everglades. I appreciate my Florida roots, and I never want to be planted in a concrete jungle. The beauty and the balance between the water and the air and the natural feel of what was... and is left of our environment in Florida is worth saving.

Repatriate the inmates and when the job is done, restore this scarred land to nature.

National Night Out - Community at its Best

by Karen Beal

Each August the Monroe County Sheriffs Office offers an informative and fun gathering which is part of National Night Out. This year's event will be Tuesday, August 5th - 5:30 to 7:30pm - at the Key Largo Community Park (mile marker 99.5 Oceanside).

It is truly a community and family event with many of your neighbors stopping by. Hotdogs and hamburgers will be grilling and there are picnic tables on site. Stroll around and meet the people who serve us in the many facets of law enforcement as well as our emergency responders.

Guidance Center and Head Start are only a few setting up booths, it is a great way to find out what this wonderful community has to offer.

National Night Out promotes police-community partnerships and neighborhood camaraderie to make our island a safer, more caring place to live. Each area of the Keys will host an event for their own community. In total, millions of neighbors take part in National Night Out across thousands of communities from all fifty states.

Fish & Wildlife officers will be there to answer questions and offer information on fishing rules. Most notably, the Key Largo Fire Rescue and Key Largo-EMS will have the big trucks shined up for tours and the crew ready for demonstrations. Community groups will be setting up tables and offering swag and information on services: the Domestic Abuse Shelter, Wesley House, Westcare Serving our Florida Keys families for all your immediate and pre-need cremation and funeral needs.

Call today or fill out the pre-need form on our website to set up a consultation with one of our caring and dedicated staff.

Protect Center Launches Limited-Edition "Fill the Tank" Merchandise to Fuel Dolphin Hospital Construction

The Protect Center's Fill the Tank campaign is a summerlong community effort to raise the remaining funds needed to complete its new Dolphin ICU Tank, a lifesaving facility designed to rescue and rehabilitate sick or injured dolphins and whales in the Florida Keys.

Limited-edition tank tops, t-shirts, and tote bags are now available for purchase at The Protect Center in Islamorada, at The Connect Center (31 Corrine Place) in Key Largo, and online at connecttoprotect.org/tank. Sales from these items are fully earmarked for the $56,000 effort, with sights set on completing the full campaign by September 1, when the Protect Center hopes to have the new tank "filled."

The campaign goal represents a dollar for each of the 56,000 gallons that the new rehabilitation tank will hold. At 40-feet in diameter and 6 feet tall, the pool will have the capacity to support multiple dolphins - or even small whales - as they recover and prepare for release back into Florida Keys waters.

But Nancy Cooper, President of the non-profit organization that holds the license to respond to whales and dolphins in the Florida Keys states: "We never know when a dolphin will strand or become orphaned - and we can't afford for the tank not to be completed and filled. This isn't just a campaign; it's a race against time. And now, our community can help simply by wearing their support."

While most of the tank's funding is already secured, the final phase of construction hangs in the balance. Delays could have life-or-death consequences for a marine mammal in need of care. Cooper notes that the project - now more than two years in the making - has weathered struggles, yet the team has remained focused on one vision: being ready when the next dolphin needs them.

"You often hear the phrase 'it takes a village,' and when it comes to building this dolphin hospital, that couldn't be more true. It's going to take all of us - a community united - to bring this across the finish line," says Art Cooper, the head responder and dolphin aficionado. Cooper has been rescuing whales & dolphins in the Florida Keys for over 30 years. "This campaign is about readiness, resilience, and the power of community."

The new merchandise features bold, fun designs that bring awareness to the Protect Center's purpose. In the first week of the campaign, over 60 tanks, tees, and totes were sold - filling the tank over 2,000 gallons! Now, Cooper says the race is on to meet the Labor Day deadline and not stall construction.

The Fill the Tank campaign culminates in a Labor Day weekend celebration on September 1. To celebrate, a "Labor [day] of Love!" celebration is planned, an open-house-style event that will feature facility tours, food, museum admission, a ribbon cutting, and what Cooper hints will be "a whale of an announcement." With strong momentum and community support, the team hopes to announce that the tank is fully funded - and full of salt water - by the time the first guests arrive.

The limited-edition tank tops, shirts, and bags are available while supplies last. Those wishing to support the campaign without purchasing can make direct contributions at connecttoprotect.org/tank.

About The Protect Center:

The Protect Center is located at 82748 Overseas Highway in Islamorada and is open to the public seven days a week from 10am - 5pm. The Protect Center will be, at it's core, a federally licensed whale and dolphin hospital offering short and long term rehabilitative care to sick, injured, and orphaned dolphins and small whales. Beyond acting as a hospital, The Protect Center is home to the "Exploratorium" a 2,000 sq.ft. interactive museum space featuring aquariums, wildlife, and exhibits and the Pearse Education Lab, a dedicated classroom space for school groups, seminars, meetings, and special events. Additionally, the Protect Center offers guests a sustainable gift shop for ocean-themed souvenirs and eco-friendly gifts.

Merchandise sales are now open as Protect Center races toward the September 1st goal.

Reading for Pleasure

Each time we read for enjoyment, the empathy awakened within us creates entire landscapes in our mind's eye.

Every book has the potential to touch the human soul deeply, arousing patterns of thought that might otherwise have lain dormant. The pleasure we derive from the written word is unique in that we must labor for it. Other forms of art provide us with stimulus and ask nothing more than our emotional response. Reading is an active pastime that requires an investment of emotion as well as our concentration and imagination. The words we read are merely a starting point for a process that takes place largely within our minds and hearts.

There are few activities as comforting, relaxing, and healthy as perusing the pages of a good piece of fiction or nonfiction. Curling up with a book and a cup of tea is one of the simplest ways we can remove ourselves from the confines of reality in order to immerse ourselves in the drama and intrigue of the unfamiliar. The pleasure of transcending reality is only one aspect of the reading experience, however. Each time we read for enjoyment, whether we prefer the fantastic nature of fiction, the empathy awakened within us by memoir, or the instructive passion of non-fiction, we create entire landscapes in our mind's eye. The books we choose provide us with the inspiration we need to accomplish such a feat, but it is our own creative reserves that empower us to use our imaginations for this unique and beautiful purpose.

The tales you lose yourself in can lead you on paths of discovery that take you out of your own life and help you see that existence can unfold in an infinite number of ways. You can learn so much from the characters who guide you from page to page. Your emotions are awakened each time you read, allowing you to become a vessel of the passion that pours forth from the pages. Ultimately, the books you absorb -- those that touch you deeply -- will become a part of who you are, providing you with a richworld within that you can revisit anytime you wish by simply closing your eyes. If you haven't read a book lately, try and allow yourself the time -- you deserve it.

HOW TO WALK A HUMAN A DOGS GUIDE

Humans need exercise. If they don't get it they become "chubby". It's up to you to save them.

1. Allow your human to tether themselves to you. This keeps them from wondering off or running away.
2. Your human will probably need breaks. Be considerate and stop and sniff often.
3. Bark frequently. Humans have short attention spans.
4. When you go to the bathroom, walk away. If you have trained your human correctly, they will pick it up.
5. Periodically drag your human as fast as you can. This is called interval training.
6. Do not allow your human to shorten the walk. They are being lazy. Sit in protest if you must.
7. Once back home, allow your human to remove their tether, then lick their face many times. This is positive reinforcement for a job well done.

Pets and Hurricane Preparedness

Hurricane season is "getting real" in August and September. You know the drill. There are dozens of articles to help YOU prepare. How about your best buddy?

Make a Plan

A good plan reduces stress during an emergency, for your and your pet. (We are going to assume you would leave your spouse behind before you would leave your pet.)

Some DO AHEAD items:

You might have to evacuate: Most shelters and hotels do not allow pets inside. Research online where you can take your pets before a storm is headed your way.

If you can't manage: Enlist neighbors, friends or relatives to care for/evacuate your pets if you are unable to do so.

Microchip: Check that your address and phone are current. Include contact information for someone outside of the storm area. Take a photo of your pet and you with your phone. It will help identify for a search and prove ownership should your buddy take off.

Crate: Long before a storm, have a traveling bag or sturdy carrier for each pet.

Pet Emergency Kit

Bottom-line basics for survival: food and water. Create several manageable, water-tight containers/jugs, if you are sheltering in place you can use them and if you need to evacuate you can pack/access smaller items more easily.

Food: Keep a two-week or more supply of food in airtight containers. Break it down, a 20 pound bag of kibble is not airtight nor waterproof. Pets get fussy about food and this is no time to experiment with a new brand.

Water: You need a water bowl and several gallons of water.

Medicine: Get an airtight container and pack all of the medicine your pet takes on a regular basis. Wouldn't hurt to add a list of those meds and copies of your pet's registration information and other relevant documents (or take a photo on your phone) for future reference.

First aid kit: A typical first aid kit could be handy. Pack pet shampoo, in case your pet needs some cleaning up. Check with your vet about meds like Pepto Bismal or Benadryl.

Dress for the occasion: Collar with ID tag worn at all times and a harness or leash. Write your phone number on your pet's belly with permanent marker. Pets get spooked and run away easily.

Sanitation: Plan for litter needs over an extended time (again, waterproof packages are better) and a (travel) litter box for cats. Stockpile newspapers for dogs. Paper towels, trash bags and household bleach will come in handy.

Last but not least: Put favorite toys, treats or a couple of your worn but not washed T-shirts in your kit. Familiar items can reduce stress for your pet.

Leaving Home

Don't let evacuation day be the first time your pet is put in its transport carrier. Leave the open carrier in places your pet is comfortable. Feed them treats near or inside the carrier. Place a familiar blanket or shirt inside.

As you stop during travel, don't open any vehicle door while there is an unsecured pet inside. If they escape, they may run away.

Whether you stay or evacuate, your dog or cat needs to be included in your emergency plan.

FEMA has more suggestions on how to prepare with your pets in mind.

Coco'Nut' Funnies

A woman who is 3 months pregnant falls into a deep coma. 6 months later, she awakes and asks the doctor about her baby.

Doctor: You had twins, a boy and a girl, and they are both fine. Luckily, your brother named them for you.

Woman: Oh no, not my brother! He's an idiot! What did he name the girl?

Doctor: Denise.

Woman: Well it isn't so bad, and what did he call the boy?

Doctor: Denephew.

Human: we have a color named after you!

Salmon: really? is it silvery blue like my outsides?

Human: no, uh-

Salmon: wait why is it pink?

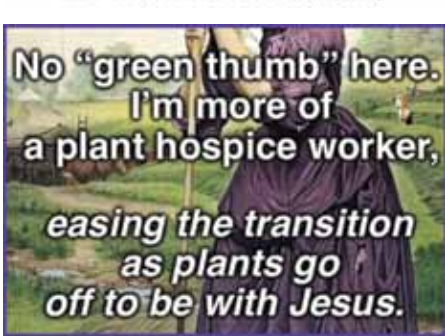

Human: ...

Salmon: WHY IS IT PINK

If you ever think mythology is boring... just remember that Cerberus, the hellhound and guard dog of the Underworld, comes from the root Indo-European word kerberos, which evolved into the Greek word kerberos, which got changed to cerberus when it went from Greek to Latin. Kerberos means "spotted."

That's right. Hades, Lord of the dead, literally named his pet dog Spot.

One time I got sick and landed in hospital.

There was this one nurse that just drove me crazy. Every time she came in, she would talk to me like I was a little child. She would say in a patronizing tone of voice, "And how are we doing this morning?" Or "Are we ready for a bath?" Or "Are we hungry?"

I had had enough of this particular nurse. One day at breakfast, I took the apple juice off the tray and put it in my bedside stand. Later I was given a urine sample bottle to fill for testing. So you know where the juice went!

The nurse came in a while later, picked up the urine sample bottle, looked at it and said, "My, my, it seems we are a little cloudy today."

At this, I snatched the bottle out of her hand, popped off the top, and gulped it down, saying, "Well, I'll run it through again. Maybe I can filter it better this time!"

The nurse has been reassigned!

An 85-year-old man was requested by his doctor for a sperm count as part of his physical exam. The doctor gave the man a jar and said, "Take this jar home and bring back a semen sample tomorrow."

The next day the 85-year-old man reappeared at the doctor's office and gave him the jar, which was as clean and empty as on the previous day. The doctor asked, what happened and the man explained. "Well, doc, it's like this... first I tried with my right hand, but nothing. Then I tried with my left hand, but still nothing. Then I asked my wife for help. She tried with her right hand, then with her left, still nothing. She tried with her mouth, first with the teeth in, then with her teeth out, still nothing. We even called up Janet, the lady next door and she tried too, first with both hands, then an armpit, and she even tried squeez-in' it between her knees, but still nothing."

The doctor was shocked! "You asked your neighbor?"

The old man replied, "Yep, none of us could get the jar open."
